

Ladies' Dressing Room

"Wearing the Right Clothes"

We may not all be beautiful, but we certainly all of us can be smart looking. You know that, all of us.

If girls would spend half the time in thought about their clothes that they waste mending and powdering their faces, what a difference they would present. I believe in a little "complication" daintily put on, but not in the heavy caluminating and farding which so many girls unfortunately think makes them supremely beautiful and attractive to men. The same girls will wear short, lady-like, colors which are too loud and do not go together, and commit all the crimes against dressing with at any convenience, because of their outside line of view.

In one of David Graham Phillips' novels, "Old Wives for New", the hero was attracted to a woman because of the perfect hem of her skirt which hung even and trim, a marked contrast to that of his wife. If a man can be stampeded by a well-hung skirt, how much more will he be attracted by charming, well-dressed and well-made little fencies which, above all, give the wearer the proper lines that belong to her!

A fashionistic dressmaker told me recently that she considered being well-dressed involved a certain amount of self denial just the same as a perfect figure does.

"If you cannot eat sweets and dainty dishes with impunity," she said, "neither should you run down through the dress models, putting on those which suit your fancy, or which you have admired on other people, without any regard for their fitness on you."

The short woman who wants to wear big hats, for instance, certainly never looks in a full length mirror. If she did, and noted how they dwarf her, she would figure out what size hat she could wear and stick to that, regardless of the disfigurements of millions who place the hats on their head while she is seated in front of a dressing table, instead of letting her stand to get the proper effect.

Then the short-waisted girl, do you think she would ever buy a model with a wide Persian girdle—no matter how pretty it looked on others—if she devoted a little time to thought and self criticism?

The thin spinster with sharp elbows would look wonderful in a fluffly caftan. Why does she so often indulge in extremely short sleeves with plain knife-like edges, which reveal her knobby elbows, when she might have them cut a more graceful length and soften them with trimming or ruffles.

They tell me another secret in the shops, no women really crave, really hankers for checks and plaids until she begins to get fat. You might almost say it was a sign and a warning and that she ought to watch her diet the minute she finds them attractive. Plump matrons come into the skirt department and ask whether one of those new plaided plaids would make them look very fat. More lack of thought and self control. They should be looking instead for stripes or plain effects to make them appear thin.

Being well dressed does not mean wearing everything that can be put on the human figure. More women make the mistake of being over-dressed than the opposite. It is a perfectly safe proportion to do without all the tags and ends that one can—not to wear dingle danglers.

A one-piece gown or a tailor-made of dark material with a little fur neckpiece, worn with a small hat and a neat veil will dress a woman more than all the furbelows ever invented.

Even in the arrangement of the hair this idea should be followed. Even the glossy beautifully waved coiffure smoothly held in place by a net wins more admiration than frizzes and curls which are more often than not, out of place.

When you are in doubt about a color for street wear, navy blue is never a mistake. There are enough variations from light navy to midnight to suit every complexion.

Watch the well-dressed woman, nine out of ten are wearing this shade.

Footwear plays an important part in the toilette of the well-dressed girl.

Trees for each pair of shoes are an absolute necessity if their trimness is to be preserved. Place the shoes on the trees the moment they leave your foot, when they are still warm, so that the wrinkles may be easily stretched out, and the shoe restored to its proper shape.

You will never make a mistake in choosing a well-cut oxford with flat heels for street wear. If you have a high arch and cannot wear a low heel, there are modifications of it, but keep the French heel for more dressy gowns than your tailor made.

And avoid all loud and unusual combinations of leathers and extreme models which are never worn by smart women.

"DYE WORK A SPECIALTY"

SOME REAL FISH

On the walls of the undertaking office rooms of Eastin & Harris are three mounted fish, a gift from Geo.

Hamilton. These fish are rare specimens, two of which come under the head of deep water fish and the other lives in water at less depth.

When angled their weights ranged from 28 to 40 pounds each. We have with abated breath listened to the stories of like gameness of these finney tribes, the catch of which came from the Cumberland, slate or some nearby pond, but these were living things, the catch of Mr. Hamilton, one of which it required two hours to land. Another specimen, the catch of Mr. Hamilton, decorates the walls of the Traders National Bank, and is a much larger fish. They carry good stories and inspire us to our ambition, to make casts in the briny deep, the excitement of a 75-pounder would bring a fresh glow and renewed vitality to simons.
